

IMSA alumnae/alumni have contributed significant research to an impressive breath of disciplines. As we enter IMSA's 30th year, help demonstrate the collective impact of that research by submitting your dissertation to IMSA's institutional repository, Digital Commons @ IMSA and share it with your former classmates and with ... well the world. Your hard work will be downloadable to any one in the world with access to the Internet. It is remarkably simple and it is free.

Here is how:

1. All you need to do is email the Author/School Relations department at disspub@proquest.com to request that a PDF version of your dissertation be sent to you via email. There is no charge for authors to receive an electronic copy of their dissertations. However, please respect your university embargo, if there is one.
2. Attach the electronic version of your dissertation to an email along with the answers to the questions listed below to us at archives@imsa.edu. It is that simple.

To help us be consistent please answer the four questions below. Universities do not all give the same information about dissertations:

1. Advisor's or Advisors' name(s) (if not clearly identified): _____
2. Graduation Date and Degree Program: _____
3. Subject Categories of your work: _____

4. Keywords to find your dissertation via a search tool: _____

We hope to see your dissertation soon on: http://digitalcommons.imsa.edu/alumni_dissertations/ !

Visit DigitalCommons for links to open-access articles, conference proceedings, teacher resources, image and audio files, as well as books, book chapters, and other creative works. We think you will find much of interest, especially in Archives & Special Collections .

Your IMSA Archives,

Marti Guarin, M.S.L.S.
IMSA Staff Ambassador

Christian D. Nøkkentved, Ph.D.
IMSA History Faculty Emeritus

Jean Bigger
Technical Services Supervisor &
DigitalCommons Manager