

The Dream

By Chandana Tetali

I must be dreaming, as moonlight envelops my silhouette.

Why else would I feel so alone? How else can I explain the cracks in my heart that you used to fill;

I can still feel your warmth – your tenderness.

What else explains the empty pill bottles scattered aimlessly around, as I embrace the welcoming night –